

TD 92/D197 - Income tax: does the receipt of a site or height allowance entitle an employee to a deduction?

This cover sheet is provided for information only. It does not form part of TD 92/D197 - Income tax: does the receipt of a site or height allowance entitle an employee to a deduction?

This document has been finalised by TD 93/49.

Draft Taxation Determinations (TDs) represent the preliminary, though considered, views of the ATO. Draft TDs may not be relied on; only final TDs are authoritative statements of the ATO.

Draft Taxation Determination

Income tax: does the receipt of a site or height allowance entitle an employee to a deduction?

1. No. An employee is entitled under subsection 51(1) of the Income Tax Assessment Act 1936 to a deduction for expenditure incurred in gaining or producing assessable income other than expenditure of a capital, private or domestic nature. The mere receipt of an allowance does not entitle an employee to a deduction.
2. The amount of a site or height allowance is assessable income and no contra deduction is allowable.

Example:

Z received a site allowance of $1740 from his employer because of difficult working conditions and remoteness of job sites. The amount of $1740 is included in assessable income. Z is not entitled to a deduction of $1740.

Commissioner of Taxation
12/11/92