 This cover sheet is provided for information only. It does not form part of PS LA 2011/5 - Recovery of administrative overpayments

 This document has changed over time. This version was published on 19 December 2024

This Practice Statement provides guidelines on the circumstances and factors to consider when taking action to recover administrative overpayments.

This Practice Statement is an internal ATO document and an instruction to ATO staff.

Taxpayers can rely on this Practice Statement to provide them with protection from interest and penalties in the following way. If a statement turns out to be incorrect and taxpayers underpay their tax as a result, they will not have to pay a penalty, nor will they have to pay interest on the underpayment provided they reasonably relied on this Practice Statement in good faith. However, even if they do not have to pay a penalty or interest, taxpayers will have to pay the correct amount of tax provided the time limits under the law allow it.

1. What this Practice Statement is about

This Practice Statement provides guidance to you about how you should recover administrative overpayments.

An administrative overpayment is an amount that we have paid to a person by mistake and that the person is not entitled to.<sup>1</sup> This administrative overpayment is a debt due to the Commonwealth by the person to whom the payment was made and is payable to the Commissioner of Taxation.<sup>2</sup>

Paying an amount to a person by mistake may result from our actions or omissions and usually relate to processing errors, such as:

- incorrectly keying or scanning amounts
- crediting an electronic refund to an incorrect bank account
- incorrectly calculating and refunding interest entitlements
- system and accounting errors.

Paying an amount to a person by mistake may also result from a taxpayer's or their representative's actions or omissions, such as:

- making a genuine mistake when fulfilling their taxation obligations
- omitting relevant information on a form
- making false and misleading statements
- fraud.<sup>3</sup>

2. When you can't use the administrative overpayment legislation

Indirect taxes

You cannot use the administrative overpayment legislation to recover overpaid amounts relating to:

- goods and services tax (GST)<sup>4</sup>
- luxury car tax<sup>5</sup>
- fuel tax credits<sup>6</sup>
- wine equalisation tax.<sup>7</sup>

This is because there is specific legislation which deals with overpaid amounts of these taxes, where the overpayment was made on or after 24 March 2010.

Overpayment to a third party

The administrative overpayment legislation also does not cover all situations that the common law does because it only applies to the person that the administrative overpayment was made to. It does not cover third parties who may have received or benefited from the overpaid amount.

Because of this, if the circumstances are not covered by the legislation, you can still use common law causes of action to recover administrative overpayments.

For example, where an overpaid amount is transferred by the initial recipient to a third party, you may need to rely on a common law cause of action to recover the amount from the third party.

<sup>3</sup> Law Administration Practice Statement PS LA 2008/6 Fraud or evasion provides guidance on dealing with taxpayers that have committed or are suspected of having committed fraud or evasion.

3. Recovering an administrative overpayment

Issuing a notice

The administrative overpayment legislation provides that we can give a notice to the person who received the administrative overpayment.

The notice must specify a due date for payment which must be at least 30 days after the notice is given. GIC will accrue on any amount unpaid from the beginning of the due date specified in the notice.<sup>8</sup>

You should issue a notice to the person who received the administrative overpayment. This ensures that the person does not have the benefit of interest-free money if they fail to pay by the due date.

Where the amount of the overpayment has resulted from an ATO processing error, part or full remission of the GIC incurred may be considered.

Other methods of recovering an overpayment

Other ways you can recover administrative overpayments include:

- contacting the recipient and negotiating the return of the overpaid amount
- commencing legal recovery proceedings.

Because GIC will accrue on any amount unpaid from the beginning of the due date specified in the notice you should issue the notice in addition to any other recovery method.

The circumstances and level of risk in each case will influence what other methods of recovery may be appropriate to use, and when you issue the notice.

Following the Compliance model, the method of recovery must be proportionate to the level of risk to the revenue and the willingness of the recipient to repay the amount.

For example, if there is a risk of the amount paid by mistake being passed onto a third person or dispersed, it could be appropriate to commence legal recovery proceedings straight away, in addition to issuing a notice.

Law Administration Practice Statement PS LA 2011/6 Risk management in the enforcement of lodgment obligations and debt collection activities also provides guidance on dealing with the risks associated with litigation action to recover debts.
